late last year in China, and most recently being appointed as the team doctor for the Australian Opals Women’s Basketball team for their 2014-2016 Olympic Games campaign. “It’s such an honour and a dream come true,” Dr Page says simply. “And I know this invaluable experience will be an asset to my practice and patients.”

But Dr Page doesn’t just offer a range of services for athletes; as a General Practitioner, she also provides a number of services for individuals of all ages, including:

- General and Family Medicine
- Workcover and Injury Management
- Women’s Health
- Antenatal Care and Child Health
- Skin Checks
- Chronic Disease Management.

Dr Page is able to offer such an extensive list of services as she has completed a number of university and postgraduate courses. She first graduated with a Bachelor of Medicine/Surgery from James Cook University in 2006 and then continued her hospital training at Townsville Hospital until 2008. After that, she undertook further study to become a General Practitioner. “After having completed my hospital training, I started my General Practice training and graduated from the Royal Australian College of General Practitioners in early 2011,” Dr Page explains. “That same year I completed a Postgraduate Certificate in Sports Medicine and then opened my new practice in early 2013. “I’ve been busy,” Dr Page adds. “But I love what I do and I am always striving to be better.” And as someone who grew up in Townsville, she’s also loved working in a medical capacity with a number of Townsville sporting teams, including the North Queensland Fury, the Townsville Fire, the Townsville Flames and Heat and the Townsville Brolgas.
